Photoshop automatically layers all the layers in an image. However, when you start working on an image, you can create additional layers and attach them to the image. (The section "Painting with layers," later in this chapter, explains how to create layers.) In Figure 6-3, Layer 6 represents the background. This background is the default Photoshop layer that represents the background of the image. If you don't change the background layer, it covers the entire image. Figure 6-4 shows a screen shot of Layers 8 and 9. (In the main window, just click the Layers panel to open it and view the Layers panel.) FIGURE 6-4: Layers 8 and 9 make up the settings for the night scene in Figure 6-3. In the Layers panel, the top layer is the background layer. In the lower half of the Layers panel, you see the object layers. (You can create and delete object layers to separate

Sleep duration and prevalence of metabolic syndrome in Saudi Arabia. Sleep is important in the management of weight, cardiovascular disease and diabetes. The effect of sleep duration on metabolic syndrome components in Saudis is still uninvestigated. The aim of this study was to measure sleep duration and investigate its association with metabolic syndrome components in a study population in Saudi Arabia. The current cross-sectional study included 1036 Saudi subjects. Sleep duration was measured as the number of hours of sleep per day. The AHA/NHLBI criteria were used to diagnose metabolic syndrome and its components. The prevalence of short, normal and long sleep duration was 24.0, 57.2 and 18.8%, respectively. Yet it was a shambles when it came to the results of the elections for the New York State Assembly. Voters were in a vague state as to the candidates' positions and a lack of attention to candidates' issues. If there was no such thing as voter apathy, it was certainly present in huge numbers. In 2004, when candidates were asked what their view of the goals of government is, 34% said "an appropriate balance between the needs of the individual and the needs of the community"; 28% said "to help meet the needs of the poor," 15% said "to help meet the needs of the middle class," 12% said "the interests of big business, industry and the wealthy," and 10% said "to preserve the environment." Compare that with the majority responses of the New York State Assembly: "to get federal money, regardless of what it cost

Richard Arkin Richard Arkin is an American writer, broadcaster, activist, and former journalist. He is known as an expert on efforts by states and international organizations to influence, monitor, and manipulate political processes, especially from the perspective of computer technology and internet media. He has consulted for the FBI and CIA, the US Congress, media intelligence operations, and the US Department of State. He is a former security analyst at the Department of State. Education Arkin received a B.A. in Political Science from Georgetown University in 1977 and a J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law in 1980. Career Before moving to public service, Arkin worked for various commercial software firms. His research and writings have focused on the use of the internet to conduct information operations and cyberspace as a strategic domain. Arkin co-founded the Human Dimension Resource Center, a non-profit think tank that studies the impact of media and technology on the development of democratic societies. The Center has published reports on information operations, including several that dealt with military aspects of the conflicts in Bosnia, Afghanistan, Iraq, Pakistan, and Iran. Arkin coined the term "informational warfare" in a 1996 paper, "The Internet and Psychological Warfare: A Threat Analysis", which said that "The use of electronic media for military purposes constitutes a fundamental change in warfare... Some argue that the future battlefield will consist almost entirely of information operations... however, it is very important to note that information operations are a distinct military function and are not a sub-set of 'communications.'" He founded and managed The United States Institute for Peace's Information Access Project, which monitors information operations around the world. After leaving public service in 2007, Arkin has been a frequent guest on news and talk radio and television shows, and wrote the newspaper columns, "Under the Radar" and "Inside Cyberwar."
